CALUMET AVENUE

HUMORS OF THE CAMPAIGN

If we must have these darned campaigns let's learn to keep up smiling, and look among the tangled skeins for incidents beguiling. By watching close the daily gulf of fancy, fact and rumor, one often finds a bit of buff to please one's sense of humor. No less a statesman as Taft, and grapple, grope and bumble is just as good as when Babe Ruth homerooses upon a groundler. To see the chumps that some one man, like Brown or Jones or Gompers, can sway the vote of Labor's clan delights us playful rompers. The thought that even who'll and who's to Gompers hand and trunche, and who's to waltz the strings he'll jerk, brings forth a good big chuckle. We've found before, in giving voice, that isn't a cheap gift, but one's history deserves to be written in Nineteen twenty, with all the force of trying, but be warned, out a lonesome fate in winning votes for Bryan. In Massachusetts, once again, a year ago this autumn, he tried to sway the workshrimen, but Copley won and caught 'em. To read that Gompers pledges Cox the solid vote of Labor is just as good as reading news of who's who of your neighbor's wife at who's who of your neighbor. So, keep your sense of humor (yes, when campaign still peroring). Twill brighten life, then you'll agree cam-paigns can be amusing.
